Sarah Pedersen is a member of the faculty of The Evergreen State College Library, where she serves among a team of librarians who share the work of reference, information literacy instruction, collection development, and library administration. As a member of the library faculty, she is expected to rotate out of the library at least one quarter every three years to teach full-time in the curriculum. Outside the library, Pedersen teaches maritime literature, sailing, and seamanship in interdisciplinary, team-taught programs planned around extended sailing expeditions. Her teaching in the library and at sea focuses on strong learning communities where students are able to discover the academic enterprises that will augment and support their deepest interests.
