Additional Resources

Learning Communities Websites

In addition to websites at individual institutions, there are three premier websites that have extensive information on learning communities and freshman seminars.

http://learningcommons.evergreen.edu is the website of the Washington Center’s National Learning Communities Project, located at The Evergreen State College. This site includes a bibliography, a national directory of learning communities in the United States, an online forum, and various useful resources on getting started and sustaining learning communities and assessment.

www.sc.edu/fye is the site of the National Resource Center for The First-Year Experience and Students in Transition at the University of South Carolina. This website offers information on their conferences, publications, and research. Especially notable are their national surveys of first-year programming.

www.brevard.edu/fyc is the website of the Policy Center on the First Year of College, which includes information on assessment, research reports, and forums and institutes pertaining to the first year of college.

Developmental Education and Related Websites

www.nade.net is the site of the National Association for Developmental Education, which provides information on best practices, statistics, and professional standards (including NADE self-evaluation guides). It also offers program certification for tutoring services, developmental coursework, and adjunct instructional programs.

www.ncde.appstate.edu is the National Center for Developmental Education site, which provides a comprehensive archive of articles, research resources, and publications (including the Journal of Developmental Education).

www.ncde.appstate.edu/kellogg.htm is the Kellogg Institute site, which offers advanced training program for developmental educators and learning skills specialists. The Institute is located at the Appalachian State University in affiliation with the National Center for Developmental Education.

www.crla.net is the College Reading and Learning Association site, which provides links to related organizations, a calendar of events, and publication resources, including the Journal of College Reading and Learning. CRLA also offers certification for tutor and peer mentor programs.

www.eiu.edu/~lrnasst/nclca/index.html is the National College Learning Center Association site, which offers the Learning Assistance Review publication.
www.ntatutor.org is the National Tutoring Association site, which offers certification as a peer tutor, paraprofessional, professional tutor, or tutor trainer/administrator. Three levels of certification are available: Basic, Advanced, and Master.

www.rit.edu/~jwsldc/NYCLSA/index.shtml is the New York College Learning Skills Association site, which offers the Journal of Research and Teaching in Developmental Education.

www.umkc.edu/cad/si/ is the Center for Supplemental Instruction site, located at the University of Missouri-Kansas City, which offers workshop information and publication material in the areas supplemental education.

Written Publications

There is a large collection of literature on learning communities available at the National Learning Communities Project website referenced above. The following literature is a highly selective list that provides a good starting place for those interested in reading more about learning communities.

Learning Community Rationale and Practice

Pedagogy

Learning Communities Implementation and Assessment

Developmental Education

